SYNOPSIS

In the town of La Elvira, Cauca, in august of 2017, a group of 50 guerrillas, in the process of laying down their weapons, wrote, produced and acted in their own stories.

The result of this audiovisual artistic exercise is this feature film, composed by 5 stories, which tells the experiences of war combatants and their transitions to a life without weapons.

This feature film composes a vision of the conflict, told by those who have suffered it.

It's the first time the war in Colombia has been told in this way.

“The actors really empathized with their roles. Real native creatives, who show what they are capable of; insightful and efficient. Their first time in front of the cameras, and their dedication to what they consider an important and useful project; this deserves the attention of the whole country”
